Nursing Careers Have a “Hire” Calling

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the nursing field is expected to grow at a rate of 26% from 2010 to 2020.¹ From hospitals and doctor’s offices to home health care, nursing facilities and even schools and summer camps - it’s estimated that 700,000 nurses will be needed - and you could be one of them!

Pursue Your Nursing Career to a Greater Degree

Nursing is a rewarding field that is full of opportunity. With the right education and credentials, you could be in a position to take your career in any number of directions after you become a Registered Nurse (RN). If you’ve thought about taking your career to another level, the Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) may be the degree program for you. A BSN degree may offer a higher salary¹ and additional opportunities including career paths to a management position or the next step to a masters or doctoral degree. If that sounds interesting, consider the Early Admission Pathway program only available through Carrington College.²
